

Career in Sports Journalism

Requirements to Study Sports Journalism

To pursue sports journalism, you typically need:

- Grade 12 with good English results: Strong language skills are essential for writing and reporting.
- General admission to a journalism program: For example, at NUST (Namibia University of Science and Technology), you must meet their general entry requirements and pass:
- A Final Selection English test
- A General Knowledge test related to journalism.

Where You Can Study

NA In Namibia:

- NUST – Bachelor of Journalism and Media Technology

Offers a solid foundation in journalism, including media ethics, writing, and broadcasting. You can specialize or build toward sports journalism through electives and internships.

Explore the program

International or Online Options:

- TECH Technological University – Postgraduate Diploma in Sports Journalism

Focuses on online, radio, and television sports journalism, including data and research tools. Ideal if you already hold a degree and want to specialize.

Learn more

Skills You'll Need

- Excellent communication and writing
- Strong research and interviewing
- Ability to stay impartial and accurate
- Good people skills for networking and field reporting

1 www.nust.na

2 www.techitute.com

3 www.namibiaeducation.info